

Chapter-1

Hnmmm so okay I will keep this completely candid like just, you know, a conversation, one-way conversation as of now. You know, so to date back to like the 11th of June, 2023, it was the curfew time, the US curfew, yes, it was a pretty harsh time. I wasn't getting any of your time, and obviously, you weren't getting any of mine. So I did sense that you were being a bit off, and I knew that I had to try, you know, fix it in some way or another. This was our very first interaction where I had you pissed off, and I completely knew that. But this time I couldn't play, you know, like the cold act of mine because, you know, at that moment, I started to care more, and I just couldn't, you know, not do anything about it. I did try, but then you too are a very stubborn person, were a bit more back then. So yes, it was pretty tough because you just wouldn't listen to me, and then I said that one thing that I did realize that I was hurting you, and that, that realization of yours or like acceptance of mine made you believe in me. And that was fixed, apparently. And you know, so it was your birthday, and I had no clue what to do, what to give, like what to even because even at that moment, I wasn't sure that I wanted to, you know, induce any kind of romantic emotion about me in you. Because at that time, I wasn't sure about myself, like how I would do if, you know, things go down that path. So I was, you know, a bit anxious about that, like what to do, and if something has to be done, then how and like, will it be safe because I, like to be very, very honest, I didn't want to hurt you just because I wanted something. Because I need to be sure about myself in the first place to, you know, initiate anything with you. Like this last year was the time where I was asking myself the questions of do I want you and to be honest, in the beginning, I was a bit hesitant because, yes, first, I didn't want to hurt you and second of all, I didn't, you know, the friendship angle, and that comes between a lot of relationships that I have seen. I don't know. So, so I had to be extra, extra aware of that, I had to give extra thoughts and all, but I would say that by the end of that month where our conversations started to get more open, more into the, you know, how to say it, like the more, more of a connecting space. Yes, where different was more blooming, like you said once, you know, I remember I was doing some tantrums, and you said that, 'you're saying this when I felt that friendship has been blooming the most'. Yes, I remember a few things. And by the end of the month, our conversations grew, like, a lot more, like they became more about us than anything else. Those late nights, they were something for sure. You know, this was the time when I was in Dumka, like with Dad, and my emotions for you grew pretty strong by the end of that month, like really, really strong. Like I know, a few things in this might be a bit tough to understand, not because they hold some layers or some shit, but just because how it is written, you know, how it is structured because I am sitting here speaking to my mic while it's being typed because, you know, I want to be more natural, more like, more like a conversation. So, my baby, I love you and happy birthday, and if all the other chapters are already released, I hope you like them.